

CENTENNIAL SESSION ASKED

Here and There

IT IS presumptuous to say that once again on Thanksgiving Eve we have much to be thankful for? If happiness speaks to you this Thanksgiving day in 1936, then you don't need to read this; but if calamity stalks you, and you catch yourself giving out constantly evil reports about your country and your neighbors and your neighbors' business, I'd advise you, then, to sit down and read Benjamin Franklin's Autobiography. Ben Franklin wasn't quite the saint that we tell the schoolchildren he was. But he was every inch a man. And he had that salty flavor of practicality which makes him especially understandable to people with troubled minds.

400 Million Cut Off Federal Budget

WASHINGTON, (AP)—President Roosevelt announced Tuesday a reduction of $400,000,000 so far in the estimates of government departments for next year's expenditures.

With the budget for 1936 almost completed for the regular departments, Mr. Roosevelt refrained from any comparison of totals with this year's expenditures. He said he had not discussed with Chairman Buchanan of the House Appropriations Committee the latter's prediction the deficit for next year could be pared to $500,000,000. Representative Buchanan left Tuesday.

Driving his car back from the swimming pool on the way to lunch, the president kept his semi-weekly press conference, stopping in front of Georgia hall at the Warm Springs Foundation.

Seated with him in the front seat was Secretary Morgenthau, Aubrey Williams, head of the National Youth Administration, got into the back seat of the open car with Gus Gennrich, personal bodyguard to the president.

Mr. Roosevelt said he had written a reply to Governor Tamm of Georgia in response to his written formal greeting. Asked about the address at the welcome home celebration arranged for him at Atlanta on Friday, he said he had written two pages of his talk Monday night, but had put them away for another start later.

Mrs. Roosevelt is coming here late Wednesday for Thanksgiving. James Roosevelt, eldest son, is expected during the day.

Tuesday Mr. Roosevelt motored to the physicians here to witness a play by patients of the foundation, an institution for the treatment of the after effects of infantile paralysis. The play was entitled "The Old Maid's Dilemma."

Futrell to Issue Call If a Revenue Bill Finds Favor

Centennial Commission Suggests $1 Driver's License for Revenue

Legislators May Be Polled on 1936 Celebration Financing

LITTLE ROCK—(AP)—Governor Futrell announced Wednesday he would call a special Centennial session of the legislature to appropriate funds for staging the 1936 celebration if sentiment could be developed among the legislators for this proposal.

The governor made his statement after the Arkansas Centennial Commission had requested that he call the special session to pass a bill providing for a state-wide auto drivers license fee of $1 per person, with 60 per cent of the revenue over a two-year period dedicated to the use of the Centennial commission in developing the celebration of Arkansas 100th birthday.

The other 40 per cent would go to the State Rangers under the proposal. It was estimated the levy would bring in $300,000 revenue in two years.

"I am not going to call a special session unless I am convinced the legislature will pass the bill," the governor said.

"I am ready to act, and if you can develop sentiment favoring this proposal within the next few days your job is done."

Cotton Certificate Demand Is Heavy

Surplus Certificates Should Be Turned Into Cotton Pool at Once

The demand for cotton tax-exemption certificates far exceeds the supply according to Ray Crain, assistant to the county agent.

Since there is such a demand at this time producers who have surplus certificates are urged to turn them in immediately to the county agent's office.

Producers should bear in mind that there is only a slight margin of not more than 200,000 bales which is expected to exist between the total cotton crop for this year and the total available of all certificates from all sources.

The National Cotton Tax-Exemption Certificate Pool was created in order to provide a form of crop insurance to those producers who did not make their total allotment because of uncontrollable causes. Since the cotton producers of Nevada county will produce more than 100,000 bales, the pool is expected to be a very important one.

Japanese Troops Pour Into China

Thousands of Soldiers Thrust Into Chief Cities of North China

By the Associated Press

Thousands of Japanese soldiers moved into important cities of North China Wednesday as their leaders announced the seizure of the railway junction east of Peiping.

Trains brought 3,000 Japanese troops and war equipment to Tientsin and the Japanese invasion at Peiping was more than doubled.

Simultaneously the Japanese military chiefs expressed disapproval of Nanking's plan to permit the Chinese to settle the North China crisis.

SHANGHAI, China.—The Chinese National government took steps Tuesday to block the North China autonomy movement, but a Japanese spokesman said they came "too late."

A program of reform in North China to prevent secession was adopted by the government at Nanking. It included an order for the dismissal and arrest of Yin Ju-Keng, leader of an independent state proclaimed Monday at Tientsin for 25 counties of Hopei and Chahar provinces.

In a conference on the situation, Maj. Gen. Rensuke Isogai, Japanese military attaché here, reported he told Gen. Chen Yi of the Nanking government that the program was too late.

Another Japanese spokesman here expressed doubt that the Nanking plan would be adequate and said Nanking should consider "popular" Northern currents for autonomy.

A Nanking dispatch said Gen. Yen Hsiao-Shan, overlord of Shansi and Shensi provinces, left Nanking for Shansi in the private airplane of Generalissimo Kai-Shek carrying Nanking's assurances of full co-operation in blocking autonomy agitation in those provinces.

Bobcats and Trojans Evenly Matched for Turkey Day Game

Contest on Hot Springs Field to Be Called at 2:30 o'Clock Thursday Afternoon

The Hope-Hot Springs football game set for 2:30 p. m. Thursday at Rix field, Hot Springs, has all the earmarks of a "dog fight" to the finish.

Hope, the powerhouse of Southwest Arkansas and district 10 champions, has eliminated every team in this section. The Bobcats have beaten nine teams this season. The last seven Hope victories have come in a row.

The Bobcats have been gunning for the Trojans in drill sessions this week. Defense formations against Trojan passing and running plays have been taken seriously. Enthusiastic pep rallies have been held. The Bobcats are primed for battle.

The dope, plus the fact that the Trojans will be playing on their home lot, will give the Hot Springs squad a slight edge. The Bobcats expect to offset that advantage with greater "fight."

Hot Springs holds a 7-to-6 victory over Camden, a team that beat Hope 6-0. The Trojans nosed out El Dorado, a team that beat Hope 13 to 0 at El Dorado. Hot Springs also holds a late season victory over Fort Smith.

A turkey dinner and pep rally will be held Wednesday night for the Bobcat team and Coaches Hammons, Jones and Martin. The dinner will be given at New Capital Hotel. Every friend and supporter of the Bobcat team is invited to attend. The turkey dinner will cost 75 cents. The meeting starts at 7:30 p. m. A large attendance is urged.

Coach Foy Hammons said at noon Wednesday that the football team was in good condition with the exception of D. Parsons and Keith. Keith has an infected foot. Parsons has a side ailment. Both are expected to play. The balance of the team is in good shape, the coach said.

Admission prices will be 25 cents for students and 51 cents for adults. Hope fans will purchase tickets at Hot Springs. No advance tickets were sent here. The game starts at 2:30 p. m.

The Bobcat team will leave Thursday morning. The 37-piece Hope Boys' band will depart soon afterward, and several hundred fans will follow.

War Threatens If Italy Is Boycotted

Extension of Sanction Plan Will Lead Mussolini to Fight, He Says

By the Associated Press

The East African conflict between Italy and Ethiopia endangered a new European unrest Wednesday.

Scenes close to Mussolini's government said that forceful resistance might be expected if the League of Nations pressed for an extension of the sanctions against Italy.

On the East African battlefields Ethiopian reports, denied in Rome, however, of victories on the southern front were followed with a campaign at Addis Ababa saying that thousands of Italians who had occupied Mukale on the northern front cleared Tuesday to Adigrat.

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia.—(AP)—Death of Lij Yasu, one-time Ethiopian ruler whom Emperor Haile Selassie had held captive in a luxurious villa, was announced by government officials Tuesday.

With his death, Haile Selassie became the undisputed sovereign of what Ethiopian officials called a united nation. They said Lij Yasu's death was more important to the independence and solidarity of Ethiopia than a decisive victory over the Italians on the battlefield, and expressed the belief Italy had now lost its chief hope of success in the war.

Prairie Mound Oil Co. Drilling Test in North County Lime Formation

Completion of a derrick in the SW 1/4 NE 1/4 14-25 on block assembled by the Prairie Mound Oil company during the summer, was announced Wednesday by the Dixie Drilling company, a New Mexico organization, having offices in Hotel Barlow.

The hole is to be a 3,000-foot test in the lime formation which runs across northern Hempstead county from Blevins to the Howard county line near Okay.

Pat Stewart, driller, announced that operations will begin in about two weeks, or as soon as machinery can be moved in and made ready for drilling.

The test will be on a 900-acre tract owned by Mrs. Vada Wheatly of Hot Springs, located six miles west of Washington.

Keeping of Farm Records Stressed

Week of December 9-14 to Focus Attention on Business Records

Farm Record week will be observed in Hempstead county, December 9-14, as part of a state-wide campaign for the keeping of accurate and complete records of farm business, according to Frank R. Stanley, county agent.

Plans are being completed for a series of community meetings which will be held in the county that week, at which time the 1934 farm record books will be returned to the farmers who completed and sent them in for use in a types-of-farming area survey conducted by the University of Arkansas College of Agriculture. Accompanying each record book will be an analysis of each individual farm in comparison to the average in the state and to other farms in the same type-of-farming area, Mr. Stanley stated.

Arkansas farmers turned in more record books in 1934 for the survey in this state than did the farmers of any other state. More than 13,000 books were studied and tabulated in the survey. 440 farmers in Hempstead county completed their records and took advantage of this opportunity for analyzing their business operations, according to Mr. Stanley.

Farmers holding crop adjustment contracts were furnished with farm record books for 1935 by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, which distributed 100,000 books throughout the state. The 1935 records will also be analyzed by the College of Agriculture in a survey similar to that conducted this year. Approximately 1500 farmers in Hempstead county are keeping record books for 1935, and it is expected that many of them will complete their records so that they may be turned in for analysis, Mr. Stanley said.

Record books for 1936 are being prepared and will be distributed to contract signers early in the year, at which time the completed 1935 record books will be collected. These farm records not only furnish the contract signers with proof of compliance and serve as a basis of future contracts, but they provide an accurate picture of the farm operations for the year, showing where the leaks occurred which reduced the margin of profit, Mr. Stanley pointed out.

Brazil Federalists Take Rebel State

Capture Natal, Last of Two Revolution Centers—Battle in Rio

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil.—(Copy-right Associated Press)—Loyal troops battled rebel soldiers in Brazil's capital Wednesday in a desperate effort to suppress what the government called a Communist uprising.

Meanwhile, the rebel forces were dislodged from Natal, which they captured last Saturday, and the government appeared to be winning its fight throughout the northeast, where the rebellion broke out.

Revolt Crushed

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil.—(AP)—Loyal federal troops drove rebels from their stronghold at Socorro, state of Pernambuco, Tuesday, the government was advised. This important victory, the government claimed, gave it control of Pernambuco, one of two revolt states in the northeast.

Federal troops were marching on the chief remaining rebel stronghold, Natal, state of Rio Grande do Norte. A bombing squadron was ordered to accompany them.

Insurgents driven from Socorro, one of three important towns held since Sunday by the Lefist rebels, fled northwest of Recife (Pernambuco) and prepared for a stand, the governor of Pernambuco reported. Socorro fell after 22 hours of fighting.

The Truth About Diet

By DR. MORRIS FISHER
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Note How Foods Affect You.

As I have said, there are wide differences in digestion between individuals. One person may digest substances which are impossible for others.

You can learn a great deal about your digestion simply by watching the way in which you react to different food substances. You should consider diet not as the taking of a single food substance, but as the sum of all the materials that you put into the stomach in a period of 24 hours, and then in periods of weeks.

Milk, vegetables, or fruit, is desirable in every meal, but the person who is sensitive to milk finds it a poison.

Q—Can bowlegs be straightened?
A—How is this done?
A—Bowlegs can be straightened in infants by use of braces, plaster casts, and similar appliances. In an adult with bowlegs, straightening involves breaking of the bone and forcible correction, sometimes open operation and surgical procedure.

Your Children

Jack came to me with his problem. He was tired struggling with college, and he just could not see two more years of it.

Dad and mother kind of feel that if I quit this year the money they've spent so far is wasted. But I'm so muddled now I hardly know what it is all about.

"What for, instance?"

"Oh, everything. I hate math and language and English and all the rest of it. I'm always being conditioned and trying to catch up. Dad wanted me to study political economy, but it's just not up to my alley. I want to live my life, not spend it living what other old fogies discovered or wrote up. If I was good and it came easy I wouldn't fuss, but it's just pure agony, that's what it is. Agony."

John Lacked Substitute Plan.

Now time and again I have said to the parents of such a lad, "Why don't you let him off? Why not let him go at the thing he really wants to do?" But Jack had such a plan. He was grousing because the world wasn't amusing enough for him. Once out, I knew he would not look at a book if he could help it. He was still too young to expect a job and some way I felt that if he licked this it would put something in him he needed. He was looking at it from the study standpoint, but I had something else in mind.

"My best course, I thought, was to encourage him." There is something odd about school," I ventured.

"Odd? What?"

"Why just this. You learn more than you think you are learning."

"I know darn well what I'm not learning and that's plenty."

Listen, Jack. About half the boys and girls who go to school, any school, think of lessons as some sort of penance they have to endure. They aren't at all interested and get out of doing everything they can. Then too, the work is always a stretch ahead. They are usually cracking their brains trying to understand why all the world all the stuff is wished on them.

Facing an Appalling Task.

"No kid ever looked over his first algebra or Latin or French grammar, or a chemistry book or even an English grammar without thinking of himself. 'What have I got to study this for? It's all crazy.' And then further along they feel the same about all the 'ologies' and 'ologies' in college."

"But they do in college, feeling like martyrs to a useless cause. They forget, or think they do, half of what they are read. Only the word 'must' drives them to get any of it at all."

"The funny thing is that years later they suddenly remember things they had in school. Things they may have flunked in, too. It's true that when you are studying you get more than you know you are getting. And for this reason I'd go on. Muddle through some way. It gets clearer after you're out."

Jack is converted. He's going on to learn in spite of himself.

A Book a Day

By Bruce Catton

In "Sawdust Caesar," George Seldes makes a forthright effort to whittle Signor Mussolini down to his proper size. His book is probably the most savage, well-sustained attack that has yet been made on the Italian dictator. Mr. Seldes bluntly pictures Mussolini as a self-out artist, a four-flusher, a physical coward, and a general, all-round faker.

He switched from pacifism to militarism early in the war, says Mr. Seldes, because the French bought him out. After the war he peddled his Fascist outfit to the highest bidder.

When the wave of Bolshevik strikes swept Italy, Mussolini was backing the strikers and actually offered the Fascists to the strike leaders. When they turned him down, he sold his services to the big manufacturers, bankers, and landowners.

All danger of Communism in Italy was gone, continues Mr. Seldes, when the Fascists finally swung into action. What Mussolini was doing, at the behest of his employers, was destroying the labor unions.

The "march on Rome" was a put-up job, staged with the connivance of army and government; Mussolini did

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Lovely DANA WESTBROOK, born and reared abroad, comes to America after the death of her parents, to make her home with a grandmother whom she has never seen.

Years before, Dana's mother eloped with young Westbrooks, leaving her husband and now in a good daughter, NANCY WAL-LACE. After the divorce, she married Westbrooks and a year later their daughter, Dana, was born.

When Dana arrives at the old southern home, she is welcomed cordially by her great aunt, MISS ELLEN CAREW, but is easily repelled by her grandmother and half-sister.

Mrs. Cameron already begins plans to introduce Dana to society, hoping she will make a brilliant marriage. Nancy is in love with rich, handsome RON-ALD MOORE but hides her infatuation. Nancy's bitter feeling against her sister is intensified when Ronald becomes interested in the younger girl.

Meanwhile Dana and young DR. SCOTT STANLEY are mutually attracted. Hearing that Scott is practically engaged to PAULA LONG, Dana asks Ronald Moore to receive with her at a party.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER VII

SARAH, her leathery black face wearing a doubtful expression, brought the message.

"Your grandmother wants to see you, Miss Dana. In her room. Dinna what Of Miss wants, but I spec it's somethin' upsettin'." I kin mos' gen'ally tell by de look in her eye."

Nancy glanced up. "It wouldn't surprise me if Sarah's hunch isn't a good one," she commented. "Especially since she wants you to come to her room."

Both girls were on the porch, Nancy swinging lazily in the worn hammock, Dana sitting nearby.

"What difference does the room make?" Dana asked curiously.

"It's an awe-inspiring place—that room," Nancy informed her. "Wait until you see it. Furnished with antiques that took a prize at an exposition once in the old days when the family treasury overflowed. Grandmother has hung onto them. I've an idea she feels like a queen restored to her throne when she closes the door of that room behind her. All the drab realities of life are shut out. It's an audience you're being granted. What an asset!"

"Ridiculous!" Dana thought, making her way up the stairs. She knocked hesitantly, the picture Nancy had evoked in her mind.

When her grandmother's "Come in," admitted her, Dana stood for a moment startled by the accuracy of Nancy's description.

Seated in a high-backed straight chair, her head raised imperiously, Grandmother Cameron did give the impression of royalty conferring favors. "Sit down, please, Dana," she said.

DANA took a seat, glancing about the large bedroom, filled with evidences of past magnificence. The massive bed was elaborately inlaid and canopied in faded blue damask. The dresser and wardrobe were of the same design.

Yes, truly the aged woman could achieve here the lady-of-the-house feeling, forgetting the shabbiness so apparent to other parts of her home, the petty problems and economies that must be so distasteful.

"The dresses have come," Mrs. Cameron said slowly. "Ellen and I drove to town for them."

"Oh," Dana began impulsively—"that's why! Nancy and I were wondering why they didn't come."

She stopped in embarrassment.

I never have believed in accepting things from tradespeople unless I am sure my instructions have been carried out, but the dresses are as they should be so we brought them home."

Dana did not reply, wondering at her own constraint. She wished she could be natural with her grandmother.

"I was gratified, Dana," Mrs. Cameron went on, "when you asked Ronald Moore to receive with you. Nancy seems to dislike him because his father happened to have the ability to make and keep a fortune. The older I grow, the more I believe money is essential as an armor of protection against the irritations of life."

Dana was thinking. "She wants me to marry rich men. Well, why doesn't she come right out in the open and say so?"

"It's absurd to think a person can't be fine and worth-while because they have money," Mrs. Cameron said, her eyes fixed appraisingly on her granddaughter. "Don't you agree with me?"

"Of course," Dana answered. "Lots of times people who have money are nicer, because they've been given the chance to cultivate their minds and improve their personalities." She expressed this conviction simply.

MRS. CAMERON nodded approval. "I have always said it was just as easy to love a rich man as a poor one. And how different your life will be if you choose a rich one."

"I shouldn't think money would make as much difference as some other things, though," Dana de-

Reddies, Tigers to Meet on Thursday

State's Oldest Football Classic Called at 2 p. m. Thanksgiving Day

ARKADELPHIA, Ark. — Arkansas' oldest football classic, and the most colorful, will have its 1935 showing on Williams field here Thanksgiving day, at 2:30 o'clock, when the Tigers of Ouachita college and the Henderson State college Reddies lock horns for intra-city honors.

Regardless of how the championship race is going, also regardless of the relative standing of the teams before Thanksgiving day, this event is looked forward to with high hopes by the alumni of both colleges. Anything can happen, often does, in this annual game.

Henderson has been the surprise team in state football this season. With a new coach and a new system, with nearly all new men, the Reddies started out auspiciously and they have kept up the pace. The stronger teams have licked them—after hard battles, but teams of their own class have had to share defeats and victories with the fighting Reddies. Coach S. B. Suduth and his able assistant, Tom Elzen, have gradually built up the offensive on the Notre Dame plan this season, and it is beginning to click. One of the heartbreaks of the season was the game with the Durant (Okla.) Teachers, the team that almost defeated Oklahoma A. M. Henderson made 15 first downs, the Durant team only one, but the latter won the game 7 to 6.

Ouachita, boasting its strongest team since 1925, has had a puzzling season. With a hard schedule all the way through, the Tigers in most cases have outplayed their rivals, but have been badly outluckied. Something has happened to beat the Tigers out in the late moments of the game. For instance, the Tigers apparently gave the Arkansas Tech team a good drubbing as far as the spectators could see, but the Techmen gained the verdict 19 to 13. Tech is doomed to win the state championship this season.

As for the game between Henderson and Ouachita, based on common opinion, some favors Henderson, some favors Ouachita. But the wise fans usually wipe the slate for the slate for this classic and come prepared to see a pitched battle, and they are seldom disappointed.

Here Is How Black-Draught Helped So Many

At the first warning symptom of constipation take purely vegetable Black-Draught for the prompt relief so many say it brings them.

"I take Black-Draught for biliousness and constipation," writes Mrs. Helen M. Williams, of Waco, Texas. "Sometimes I have headaches from this trouble or feel dull and sluggish, and I feel this way until I take Black-Draught and get the impurities out of my system, after which I feel world better."

The writer of the above statement has taken Black-Draught, when needed, since she was a child. "Black-Draught, to my mother, was a family medicine," said Mrs. Williams.

Thanksgiving

For tree and bird and babbling brook,
For sunny hillside, shady nook,
The joyous laughter of a child,
The perfume from the flowers beguiled.

For that which never wealth can lend,
The marvel of a long tried friend;
For harvest, with great strength imbued

To feed the hungry multitude,
For life, the chance to do and be
The thing our inmost eye can see,
For night, with starry host on high,
That brings Thy peace and power nigh,
For truth and faith, sincerity,
That bring our hearts more close to Thee.

For all we are or hope to be,
We bring our tribute unto Thee.

"Annapolis" at the Saenger Thursday

Naval Academy Story Is on Local Screen Thursday and Friday

All the color, spirit, courage, patriotism, traditional ideals and historical beauty for which the United States Naval Academy stands, is reproduced in "Annapolis Farewell," Paramount's authentic film document of a midshipman's life in this famous school, showing Thursday and Friday at the Saenger.

The rigorous daily schedule, the arrival of plebes, whipping them into shape, the efficient discipline, the middies at mess, at work, at study, at play, at drill, at gun practice, on dress parade, the gradual training and molding into clean American manhood of the boys who enter Uncle Sam's sacred portals all constitute a stirring, picturesque and important background to the main theme of this impressively realistic photoplay.

The story centers around the problems, training and romances in the lives of Cromwell and Brown during their middle years at Annapolis. It remains for Sir Guy Standing to show them the real meaning of their education at the academy. In one of the most exciting gun battles ever filmed, the boys are brought to a realization of the trust imposed on them.

Sir Guy Standing, in the role of retired naval officer who lives in the memories of his days at Manila Bay when he fought under Dewey, gives one of the most superb portrayals of the year, and the most important in his career.

Richard Cromwell and Tom Brown, cast as roommates and rivals in the picture, are excellent in their parts. Rosalind Keith as the romantic interest in the film, rival in the boy's affections, is just the kind of girl a young middle would be expected to have.

By the Associated Press
One hundred Ethiopians, including two provincial governors, were reported killed Tuesday in an official communique issued at Rome describing a battle north of Dolo, on the southern front in Italy's campaign of occupation in Ethiopia.
Italian losses were announced as four native soldiers killed, five wounded, and two missing.
Rain over all fronts impeded somewhat the preparations for new Italian advances.

Searching Out Tuberculosis

Simple, harmless and painless though it is, the tuberculin test is a reliable means of discovering whether germs are in the body. The girl above is receiving the test. It consists simply of the injection of a drop of harmless liquid, called tuberculin, under the upper layer of skin on the forearm. If a red spot appears there by the following day it indicates that tubercle bacilli, the germs that cause tuberculosis, have obtained a foothold in the body. This does not mean that disease exists, but an X-ray picture should be taken to discover whether any harm has been done to the lungs and to what extent. If active disease is present the child should be placed in a sanatorium immediately. Tuberculin tests among school children to help discover the disease in its early and curable stage are one of the most important projects conducted by tuberculosis associations throughout the country. Such work is paid for by Christmas Seal funds.

Boston Club Taken Over by National

National League Assumes Charge of Braves in Financial Trouble

NEW YORK.—(AP)—As the climax of protracted and involved financial difficulties, the Boston franchise was taken over Tuesday night by the club owners of the National League. Ford C. Frick, league president, said the action was taken "because of the failure of the Boston National League Baseball Company to fulfill its contractual obligations."

The league president said he would "consider any proposals submitted in writing before December 10," the date of the annual league meeting in Chicago.

He said that no proposals had been received, but that the league guaranteed that there would be no break in the operation of the Braves, regardless of whether or not the club was purchased.

WITH THE LADIES

Roses wither, Snowflakes melt. Toothache runs its course. Marriage is that way, too. It is as fragile, apparently, as a June moon or pair of net hose.

The waltz is scarcely begun when one or the other of the two who started the ball with a Lohengrin procession decides that he doesn't want to dance any more—or that he wants a partner who knows more exciting steps.

Government statistics furnish us with proof. They show that the average marriage lasts six years and eight months, according to Jack Anthony, director of the Marital Relations Institute, of New York City.

I wonder how they last that long, considering the attitude with which the majority of brides and bridegrooms enter the sacred contract. So do Mr. Anthony and the probate clerks and everybody else, including the nuptial candidates themselves.

"I Don't Know" Marriages
The other day the Marital Relations Institute had 18,000 persons, throughout the United States, questioned when they applied for licenses, as to why they wanted to be married. Ninety-one per cent replied: "I don't know," or some vague, patterned phrase which meant the same thing.

"I don't know!" Then how could they hope to build something beautiful, secure, lasting, whose walls would rise high enough to shut away all lesser loveliness? How could they lay foundations for a structure, however humble, in a kingdom that 19th century levers—they knew why they loved, too—called Paradise when the young moderns never have sighted a spire.

Twenty-three per cent of the people questioned said that they were marrying for financial security. Women have been known to use marriage as an economic gesture, but it is disappointing to have 234 of them admit they prefer cheek books to love. By the same count, it is much worse to discover that 119 men were exchanging their names for economic security. Surely the ghosts of the knights who once rode to tournaments to win a lady's favor must shudder at the degradation of their grandsons who marry to be taken care of.

Those 119 women who were being wed because they could provide two pairs of woolen blankets for winter nights and orange juice and oatmeal for breakfast went on with the ceremony.

One-Third Expect Permanence
Of the 18,000 candidates for marriage only 6120 said that they expected the marriage to last forever. It is small wonder, then, that the average duration of an American marriage is less than seven years. The marvel is that marriage endures so long! With a marrying populace of defeatists, certainly we can't expect sturdy foundations on which will rise structures which will withstand waters, winds and storms.

Children might solve the problem, some sociologists will say at once. Of course they might. However, two people who think so little of each other that they can't have the same address unless a tie of duty holds them, can't create a happy home environment.

Anyway, if children are a help then it's women, not men, who are failing. Eighty-two per cent of the men stated that they desired children. Only 21 per cent of the women did. Men, it would seem, want to build as securely as their fathers and grandfathers before them. Women don't want to be bound.

It would appear from the report that men want the old conventional setting of a fireside, children, love, peace—home. Women have strayed away.

People regarded the telephone as a curiosity when it was first invented. Bell educated them to use it by giving a series of lectures and entertainments by telephone.

There are No Safer Brakes Made

—than the Super-Safety Brakes on the 1936 Ford V-8—

No other car in America has the same basic design as the Ford V-8. And because of its unique design—the Ford car could use any type of braking system now in common use.

BUT, with the whole field to choose from, Ford stands by mechanically-operated Super-Safety brakes as safest for the Ford V-8.

This is the type braking system on many of America's costliest cars and most racing cars. And with its unique chassis design, Ford can use this system to better effect than any other automobile built today.

Then, Ford has more effective braking surface (186 square inches) than is found in any other low-priced car. And big, 12" alloy-iron drums with special cooling fins to give you maximum braking power under all road conditions.

All in all, no safer brakes are made than you get in the 1936 Ford V-8. And right through this Ford V-8 is the same sound engineering for safety and comfort. Ford uses a one-piece, welded-steel body because it is safer and quieter. Ford gives you Safety Glass in every window at no extra cost because Ford believes it is the manufacturer's duty to provide for maximum safety as part of the car's sales price.

Drive the Ford V-8. See how it "holds the road" on curves—how dependably the brakes work on rough roads, steep hills, or anywhere else. Get in touch with—

FORD PERMANENT WHEELBASE

Radius rods [1] brace the front axle—like a pair of giant arms. Radius rods and Torque-tube [2] give triple bracing to the rear axle. This construction means that the front and rear axles of a Ford car are held always equidistant—always in perfect alignment. On this permanent wheelbase any braking system now in common use could be used. And only with this Ford-type wheelbase can mechanical, Super-Safety brakes be used to the fullest advantage.

FOUR INDEPENDENT BRAKE RODS

Note the four brake rods [3] of strong, tempered steel. These rods link the pressure of your foot on the pedal with the four big brake-drums on the wheels. They do this job positively, surely, under all road conditions. Note especially that no one Ford brake has to depend on the other three. Failure of one (practically impossible) would leave three perfectly-operating brakes. Tear out this chart and check with the car you are driving now.

1,000 Tenants to Get Land Chance

Limited Attempt at Ownership to Be Made in Four Southern Areas

WASHINGTON—(AP)—An attack on the South's farm tenant problem, involving removal of 1,000 tenants to small farms of their own, was announced Tuesday by Rexford G. Tugwell, chief of the Resettlement Administration.

The chief of the Resettlement Administration reported the trial "cases" would be chosen from four parts of the South. The experiment, he said, should "be an indication of what can be done in a national way to solve the tenant problem."

Tugwell said that he expected to have this and other wide segments of the resettlement plan underway by the time next year's crops have been planted.

"It has always been our intention," Tugwell said, "to have the resettlement work a function of the Department of Agriculture. It obviously is a part of agricultural adjustment, and it has to be almost exclusively with farmers."

"We have been studying the proposed Bankhead-Jones farm tenant bill, which was designed to enable tenants to become landowners. We find that we can do it in a small way what this bill intends. What we will do will come under the classification of our resettlement and rehabilitation work."

North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and the area embracing the line where boundaries of Arkansas, Mississippi and Louisiana touch have been designated for the selection of specific sections for the tenant trial.

The plan calls for the administration to buy land and resell it to the tenants under a long term agreement. The agreement, Tugwell said, probably would run not more than 40 years in some cases, tenants would be sold the land they now are cultivating. In others, they might be given an opportunity to move to some nearby farm.

Farms sold to the tenants would remain under supervision of Extension Service and resettlement officials during the period of the loans, and administration help would be expected to assist the tenants to gain a self-supporting basis.

CHAPTER VIII

THE two girls faced each other.

Dana said, "Oh, Nancy, I've never seen you look so sweet!"

Nancy, still standing in the doorway, hesitated. Then she said brusquely, "Cut the compliments. I suppose you haven't looked at yourself?"

"Do you like me, Nancy?" The question was anxious.

The other girl's eyes narrowed appraisingly, taking in Dana's beauty. Yes, Grandmother had done a darn good job. If knocking Ronnie Moore cold with beauty would win a proposal from him, the trick was done.

"Well, what do you think?" Nancy asked, avoiding a direct answer to her sister's question. "It's a nice dress all right—on you."

"You're being silly," she said. "If you only know how you really look!"

"How do I look?" Nancy asked.

Dana thought, "She isn't exactly pretty, but there's something awfully attractive about her. Something exciting. It's as though you were looking at a volcano, about to explode. No, you couldn't possibly overlook Nancy in a crowd."

Aloud, Dana said, "You look like a charming girl that has been tan glowing in a cloud and then come floating down to earth."

"Your fairy-tale lore is a little mixed," Nancy told her. "Elves don't inhabit clouds. They are, or were supposed to be, very earthy people, and I don't recall they had any special charm or good looks. But you look like the beautiful fairy who appears on occasions to dazzle folks."

She turned then, and was gone.

Dana, alone, felt bewildered and troubled. Perhaps what she had said had been unfortunate. The wrong thing. "But, we're two grown girls," Dana told herself. "Not children. And we're both nice enough looking. Who cares about looks anyway, as long as you can dance and swim and have some fairly bright ideas circulating in your head?"

Why had Nancy started all this foolishness anyway, when the musicians downstairs were beginning to play a foxtrot? And it was time for both of them to go down. With Grandmother such a stickler for etiquette, it would be dreadful to have guests arrive before they were ready to receive them.

had considered making Lij Yasu the emperor if their invasion were successful, and that they even had attempted to kidnap him from captivity for this purpose some years ago.

Selassie Into Mourning. A distant cousin of the emperor and a grandson of former Emperor Menelik, Lij Yasu, 38, died of a lingering illness, it was said.

Haile Selassie, who became regent when Lij Yasu was deposed in 1916, went into mourning for his predecessor. The present emperor, as regent, shares the throne with Queen Zauditu, Lij Yasu's aunt, who was the daughter of Menelik.

The great Emperor Menelik, who built Ethiopia into a strong state from a group of semi-independent kingdoms, had nominated Lij Yasu as his successor before his death in 1913.

Reigned Without Crown. Internal rivalries prevented Lij Yasu's ever being formally crowned, but he took the reins of government. During his three-year rule, his inclination toward Islam antagonized his subjects, who are proud of their 15 centuries of Christian tradition.

The Ethiopian church excommunicated him in 1916, and the great races (chiefly) deposed him, proclaiming Zauditu as empress and Ras Tafari (now known as Haile Selassie) as regent.

Ras Tafari had married Walizaro Nenen, who also had direct descent from Menelik, and thus had a claim to the throne which somewhat paralleled that of Lij Yasu.

Forces Slaughtered. Lij Yasu was not content to be ousted and with the assistance of his father, Ras Mikael, he fought the new government. But Lij Yasu's forces were defeated with great slaughter.

October 27, 1916, Ras Mikael was captured and Lij Yasu became a wanderer.

There was sporadic fighting until Lij Yasu was captured in 1921. In 1932 he escaped, disguised as a woman, but was again seized before a newly planned revolt could get under way.

Many reports circulated since then that he had died, but the Ethiopian government revealed last June that he was held in the villa at Tiara Mulata.

One report had it that Lij Yasu was allowed great comforts, and that though he was fastened by chains, they were of gold. For a while it was thought he was held in the emperor's own palace in Addis Ababa, to prevent kidnapping by the Italians.

Cotton Certificates

duce about 50 per cent of their allotment this year, they should take advantage of this opportunity and surrender their certificates to the pool.

Cotton producers in Nevada county received $42,333.89 from the sale of surplus certificates through the national pool in 1934.

The national pool will sell these certificates to producers in other states at the rate of 4 cents per pound but the cost of operating the pool will be deducted from total sales but we do not feel as though producers should have any fear as to what the cost of handling the certificates by the national pool might be, as they were handled so very cheaply last year. To be exact, the cost was $9,004.1 per pound of tax-exemption sold, or in more easily conceived figures $9.41 per hundred pounds sold.

Clipper on Next to last Pacific Lap

On Way From Wake to Guam—to Reach Philippine Islands Thursday

WAKE ISLAND.—(AP)—(Via Pan-American Airways Communications).—One China clipper sped toward Guam Wednesday with the first transpacific air mail after an early take-off from this a toll station.

The big flying boat, scheduled to complete the 8,000-mile inaugural flight to Manila Thursday on its fourth day out of Alameda, Cal. Ahead of it lay the 1,536-mile stretch to Guam and 1,700 miles from there to Manila.

As the clipper skimmed away from the harbor here at 6:04 a. m. (2:04 p. m. Wednesday Eastern Standard Time) she had 38½ hours flying behind her from Alameda.

9 States Enlist in Safety Plans

35 Per Cent Decrease in Accident Toll Is Sought by the Nation

CHICAGO.—(AP)—Nine governors enlisted their states in a nation-wide campaign to cut automobile accident deaths Tuesday.

The National Safety Council, sponsoring a five-year drive to begin January 1 and designed to bring about a 35 per cent decrease in motor vehicle fatalities, disclosed promises of co-operation from the nine executives and officials in 10 other states within 24 hours of the announcement of the program Monday.

As the nucleus of the movement the council already had 30 states participating in its regular work, 800 cities entered in its traffic safety contest, 57 local affiliated safety groups and 4,000 members, including railroads, utilities, industrial concerns and mines.

Gov. Harold J. Hoffman of New Jersey headed the governor list. He suggested the council launch a nationwide crusade to cut automobile deaths in the traffic safety contest. By 1941, it would be at least 35 per cent under the all-time high of 38,000 in 1934.

Couch Calls Session of Commission at the Governor's Office

LITTLE ROCK.—Urgent demand for immediate action upon plans for the Arkansas Centennial celebration, has caused Harvey C. Couch, chairman, to issue a call for a meeting of the Arkansas Centennial Commission for Wednesday morning in the governor's reception room at the state capital. In his formal call, Chairman Couch states that his commission is probably the most important he will issue to the members during the year.

Wednesday that Hope fans would obtain their tickets at Hot Springs. No Advance tickets were sent here. The prices to the game will be 26 cents for students and 41 cents for adults. Members of Hope High School faculty will be at the gate to identify Hope students.

Other Hope residents will journey to Arkadelphia to witness the annual clash between Ouachita and Henderson State Teachers college.

Hunting trips, visits to relatives, and other activities are planned for Thanksgiving.

Postmaster Robert Wilson announced that the Hope postoffice would be closed all day Thursday. There will be no window service, no city delivery and no rural delivery.

Important task for the commission working as a unit which has developed since I was elected chairman," writes Mr. Couch. "I have just returned from Washington with assurances of helpful co-operation from high officials of the Federal Government, including the President himself, who has definitely promised to visit us and start the Centennial. It is now perfectly clear that the way is opening for Arkansas to plan and carry out the most original and inspiring celebration in the history of the nation."

"The next step in our plans is so momentous that I would not consider undertaking it without the wholehearted united sentiment and influence of the entire commission. I am, therefore, asking you to make it a matter of the highest public interest to meet me and the other members of the highest public interest to meet me and the other members of the commission, November 27, promptly at 10 a. m."

"I wish I had time to report to you in some detail the work that your executive committee has been doing. I can only tell you that the framework has been set up for an observance that will deeply stir the loyal pride of all Arkansas people and compel the admiration of citizens of other states."

Farmers' Income Up 177 Millions

All Areas Ahead of Last Year Except the South-Southwestern

By WILLIAM S. WHITE Associated Press Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—The government, ending up the American farmer's books as he heads into the last quarter of the year, finds he may celebrate Thanksgiving with his ledger $177,000,000 heavier on the black side from regular income—exclusive of benefit payments—than in 1934.

The U. S. bureau of agricultural economics says farmers took in for the first nine months of 1935 from the sale of principal products $4,304,000,000, compared with $4,127,000,000 last year and $3,460,000,000 for 1933. Too, benefit payments for this year at the latest tabulation were running well ahead of last year—$349,614,000 against $250,369,000. In this kind of income, the countryman was around $1000,000 richer than in 1934.

Two Sections Lose. In the last month of the period—September—cash receipts from crops declined about 8 per cent, heavier marketings not offsetting lower prices; but a 19 per cent jump in income from livestock more than made up the deficit.

All save two sections of the country—the south Atlantic and south central—shared in the rise. Both these areas, comprising the old solid south with a few border states thrown in, fell off. Lower cotton prices took a heavy share of the blame.

Every region, says the bureau, found extra money coming in from livestock. Meat prices were good and marketings heavier. Eggs brought in more profits, so did dairy products.

Receipts By Area. As is usual, seasonal fluctuations in receipts were more marked in the southern states than elsewhere. In Dixie cotton and tobacco are the main sources of revenue and the money really pours in only in the marketing season for those products.

Here are the bureau's figures as to cash receipts from sale of principal farm products, benefit payments not included, by sections:

North Atlantic, comprising all of New England, New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania: $518,155,000 this year against $482,450,000 last year.

East North Central, comprising

Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin: $888,085,000 this year against $718,517,000 last year.

West north central, comprising Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas: $1,028,710,000 against $945,524,000.

South Atlantic, comprising Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida: $410,432,000 against $436,252,000.

South central, comprising Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Texas: $640,348,000 against $645,236,000.

Western, comprising Montana, Idaho, Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, Nevada, Washington, Oregon, California: $731,487,000 against $655,053,000.

"Good gal," Scott said, crushing her hands in his. He stared down into Dana's laughing, eager face.

Dana was sure it was going to be a lovely party. The cakes, the Washington had been molding so cleverly all afternoon were beautiful with their fluted edges and dainty flower decorations. At night, with the crystal chandeliers blazing down, most of the drabness of the big reception room was concealed, and the shining surfaces of fine old furniture were revealed.

The worn rugs had been removed for dancing and flowers from the garden had been brought in abundantly, adding color. In Dana's mind the party had just one flaw. She had hoped to invite the attractive young doctor to this party, but her grandmother had turned thumbs down on the suggestion—so reluctantly Dana had been surprised.

"Scott Stanley's been away so long, he's almost a stranger here," Mrs. Cameron had said. "He has a long way to go if he's going to amount to anything as a doctor. Besides I can't invite every Tom, Dick and Harry in this town."

That had been that. Still it was going to be a lovely party—

Dana touched the orchids on her shoulder caressingly. Her first or chids. It was thrilling to be wearing them. She thought of Ronnie with a little glow at her heart.

DANA, whirling from the arms of one partner to another, felt she was moving in a dream. This was not Paris, where the social life of her school friends had been supervised so rigidly. Nor was it like those parties, tinged by Bohemianism, in which her father had participated occasionally after her mother's death—parties from which Dana had been carefully excluded owes all this popularity to him. If he drops her, let her look out!"

Ronnie was pleading with Dana. "I can't talk to you at all. I get half way through a sentence and somebody taps me on the shoulder. It would take hours for me to tell you all I really want to say. Oh, Dana, how beautiful you are!"

He held her closer. "Will you dance to the door with me and then step out on that side porch for a breath of air?"

"Should I?" Dana asked.

"It's a good old American custom," Ronnie said.

"Then, all right," Dana agreed, impulsively.

The porch was cool, dim, vine-shaded. "Perfect," Ronnie said softly. Dana laughed. "Almost perfect. I know it doesn't sound romantic, Ronnie, but I'm frightfully thirsty."

"Just as romantic as can be," Ronnie said. "Remember what old Omar, the poet, said about a lot of bread, a jug of wine and a girl singing in the wilderness? Well, I'll get the wine or rather punch. Here are the vines which must do for the wilderness. And then!"

"I can't sing, though," objected the practical Dana.

She watched him, silhouetted in the light for a moment before the door closed behind him. Ronnie was awfully nice, awfully good looking and of course, awfully rich. He was probably an awful flirt, too, like the young doctor who had said such flattering things. It was just an old southern custom, saying things to please people, and then forgetting you had said them. Like Dr. Scott Stanley who had boasted he'd come to her party, invited or not.

A LOW whistle startled the girl. It was followed by a second, louder whistle.

Dana got to her feet and stepped from behind the concealing vines. Standing near the old fountain was a tall figure. How could Ronnie have reached the garden—

It was of course it wasn't Ronnie. It was that outrageous young doctor! Laughing softly, Dana picked up her long skirt and ran down the steps into the garden.

"Good gal," Scott said, crushing her hands in his. He stared down into Dana's laughing, eager face.

Only a shork while ago Ronnie had said "How beautiful you are!" Somehow, to Dana, this hadn't the same sound. "I'm awfully sorry about the invitation," she told him.

"I didn't need an invitation to jump a wall," Scott laughed.

"I don't know what they might think of me. What if my grandmother—"

"And Ronnie!" Scott prompted.

"It wasn't very nice to run off and leave him," Dana argued.

"Not very nice, but necessary," Scott rejoined. "You must have known that if you hadn't I'd have come after you. I've been here nearly an hour, wondering how I was to manage it. Then you and Ronnie came out on the porch and he very obligingly disappeared."

"But he only went for a moment," Dana said. "He'll be back. There he is now."

"Let's duck," Scott whispered.

Dana found herself clinging to his hand, running with him. At the end of the garden, the brick walk was illuminated with moonlight, but a tree threw an old bench to shadow.

"I haven't the slightest idea why I came," Dana said.

"I have," Scott answered. "I brought you! I had to make up my mind about you."
